TIMELY GOSSIP

T. E. Mitten, New Philadelphia Exhibitor, Buys Last of Vau-

Vauclain's Broadiawn stables to Thomas I. Mitten, a notable recruit in the ranks of exhibitors. Mr. Mitten has not only purchased Princess Shella, Kathleen Moibourne, Mysterious, ailas Little Fire Lady, Velvet Fire, Willisbrook Fire Boy, Arbite and other prize wifning hackneys and hunters, but has taken ver Mr. Vauclain's master of horse, Patrick O'Conneil, who will have charge of the Mitten show stable and the stud at Dunronin Farm, near Roxbury, in the suburbs of Philadelphia. The stable is to be a strong one, according to report. Boy, Arbite and other prize wifning hackneys and hunters, but has taken over Mr. Vaucialris master of horse, Patrick O'Connell, who will have charge of the Mitten show stable and the stud at Dubronin Farm, near Roxbury, in the suburbs of Philadelphia. The stable is to be a strong one, according to report, particularly in harness horses, which nowadays are so costly to buy and transport that few except millionaires any longer exhibit hem. When they go to shows they will travel in a private six horse motor van, which is now being built for them.

the man of the hour in the Quaker City. As president of the street railroad system he has distinguished himself by quickly converting a business on the verge of bankruptcy into a prosperous one, with contented employees and satisfied stockholders. But for the enlightenment of New York's Bolsheviki ft should be added that he didn't attempt to do it on the basis of a twenty mile ride for a depreciated nickel. Before Mr. Mitten took hold of the Philadelphia situation he had transformed liabilities into assets in a somewhat similar tangle in Chicago. E. T. Stotesfury, formerly president of the National Horse Show Association, is credited with having induced him to leave the Western metropolis, and it is said that he has lately refused a fabulous offer to come to New York with his new brand of oil for troubled traction waters.

With Company sold two

With O'Connell as manager and trainer of the Dunronin Farm Stable a new and interesting question will be presented for decision by the Association of American Horse Shows. It will be remembered that "Fancy Pat," as they roall him in Philadelphia, was suspended from all shows for one year by the A. A. H. S., following the discovery that he had put a two-year-old hackney into a class for aged saddle ponies at the National last fall and won everything until her age and identity were discovered. Officials of the spring shows are now wondering whether to accept entries from a stable with which the suspended professional horseman is connected. The case is new in horse show affairs, and they will ask for an early ruling by the A. A. H. S. The prevailing opinion seems to be that while O'Connell may not be permitted to drive for his new employer the penalty imposed in connection with the episode at Madison Square Garden will hardly be held to bar him from training Mr. Mitten's horses.

The Bergen Horse Company sold two consignments of fresh Western work horses on Wednesday in the regular works and they guestion at their Jersey City stables, Dealers from all over the State were present to bid for them.

The steamship Menominee of the Atlantic Transport line will carry a large consignment of trotters to England from this port on April 19. George Watson's charge of Charles J. Barrie.

Waller & Potters will sell another big run of seasoned work horses on Tuesday at their auction at their Jersey City stables, led the discovered were present to bid for them.

The dispersal of the Vauclain horses and ponies marks the passing of a stable that has figured prominently at American, shows since 1913. It was in that year that O'Connell went to England and brought back The Whip and Princess Shella, two of the most successful hackney harness mares ever seen here. He was sald to have paid $10,000 for The Whip, then a green four-year-old that bore little resemblance to the stunning high stepper she has since become. Miss Anne Vauclain exhibited the horses for two or three years and then Miss Constance Vauclain took the reins. She exhibited saddle horses and hunters as well as harness horses and ponies and greatly enlarged the string. No other exhibitor in the country did more than she did to support the shows through the critical period of the war and there was genuine regret everywhere when it became known that the stable was to be dispersed. She and her husband, William H. Hamilton, are now living in Brussels, Belgium.

J. A. P. Ramsdell, who celebrated his long and the passing of a stable at Durland's, expect to bring out in Brooklyn next week one of the best over the best saddle horses they have ever shown.

John T. Spratley & Son, who are now in Brooklyn next week one of the best optices and burler's exaddle horses they have ever shown.

M. B. Newcomb's sale stable, at the Seventh avenue entrance to Central Park, is one of the buslest places in town these days. It is chock-a-block with fine riding horses.

A. M. Stein & Co. of Brooklyn are finding buyers for a good many good, big, seasoned work horses among Long Island farmers this spring.

H. Kauffman & Son, who are now in their new building in Division street, two blocks south of the Williamsburg Bridge entrance, have been in the saddlery and harness business since 1875.

Godfrey Prece of Westbury, L. L. has soid almost a carload of saddle horses, policy for the control of the war and there was genuine regret everywhere when it became known that the stable was to be dispersed. She and her husband, william H. Hamilton, a

J. A. P. Ramsdell, who celebrated his eightieth birthday not long ago, is going to bring out in Brooklyn next week a cheatnut gelding that he says he believes to be the best saddle horse he has ever shown. Glendee is his name. His color is cheatnut and his height 15.3 hands. He is five years old and has never been exhibited. Like most of the good ones, he is saddle bred, by Marvel McDonald, son of Rex McDonald. Grover McDonald, son of Rex McDonald. Grover McLain, who got his early schooling in horsemanship under Ed Geers, will ride the new aspirant for championship honors.

The "challenge cup" offered by E. J. Lehman of Chicago at the Devon Horse Show is an antique silver coffee urn about eighteen inches high, made in 1776 by David Fogelberg in London, England. It will be given for Corinthian hunters and must be won three times to become the property of an exhibitor.

Apropos of hunter classes, Lieut.-Col. Herbert C. Cox of Toronto has given a cup for competition at the Rochester Horse Show next September under conteur rider and the horse regularly hunt-ed as distinguished from the purely here show jumper, whose manners may or may not fit him for the hunting field. Competition will be restricted to horses hunted at least six times during the season of 1920-21, with a recognized pack of hounds, amateur members of recognized hunts to ride in full hunting constume.

HARBISON HORSES UNDER THE HAMMER

Saddie bred horses from Kentucky topped the market for this season when shelby T. Harbison's first spring shipment was sold on Tuesday evening by George A. Bain at Durland's Riding Academy. The first one offered was struck off for $2,325 to W. D. Grend, who was acting for Clarence Deshong of Chester, Pa. Bubbles, the mare in question, was a seven-year-old bay, just above the pony height, with lots of quality and style. She won first prize at Lexington last fall, and is counted on to win many more this season. Cream of the Lot, an exceptionally fine looking and flash going big horse, but a little light in the flank and short in the back ribs, brought $225. Blue Bell, another show prospect, went to $1,825. The total for eighteen head was $12,585, and the average $592.
